Arlington Almshouse Property Damaged Thursday Evening—John aged Thursday Evening-John Haas, an Inmate, Charged With Crime Confesses—In Court Today.

The arrest of John Haas, an inmate of the Arlington almshouse, followed a brisk fire at the town farm, Thursday evening. Haas was charged with arson and confessed his guilt. He was before the Cambridge court yesterday and was held under $500 bonds until today and will be examined as to his sanity. Box 43 sounded the fire alarm at 7.54 Thursday evening. A second alarm was quickly sounded and the fire department was scon on the scene. The fire was first discovered in the tool house, but flames also appeared in the tramp house and the pound house. The firemen coped with the fiery element in perfect shape and prevented the almshouse from burnand prevented the almshouse from burning as well as saving considerable other property. One end of the shed next to Summer street was burned and the barn badly gutted. A large quantity of hay was destroyed by fire and water. Officer John Duffy discovered the cause of the trouble in the person of Haas, who confessed all. He was somewhat erratic in his statements, but claimed he had been ill-treated, and so took this somewhat strenuous means to get square. He said that yesterday he had saturated seme walls with kerosene, and prepared to make the final move Thursday night. He had taken a lighted newspaper and set fire to the buildings in five different places.

Session in Lexington-All Sides Now Claim to be Pleased With Re-

But a small number attended the hearng at the Lexington town hali, Thursday morning, when the county commissioners were present to listen to objections to the proposed plan of widening the avenue along the lines laid down by the county fathers, and to hear any statements which might be made relative to the damages which would result therefrom. The hearing was announced at 10 o'clock, but owing to delay in the arrival of Chairman Gould it was nearer 11 before the meeting was formally called to order.

The session was a short one and was attended with no excitement, such as characterized the former hearing. The characterized the former hearing. The commissioners had before the citizens a map of the proposed change in the location of Massachusetts avenue from Arlington Heights to Oak street, through a part of East Lexington. The board had Leed the plan submitted by an engincer at the former meeting, but had made some changes which were thought to be loccessary. The new lines, instead of widening on the north side of the avenue between the Patrick Sullivan estate and Hillside avenue, took a slice off of the southerly side. This appeared to be satisfactory to a larger number, and the commissioners believed it to be the better way.

WILL NOT RUN AGAIN.

County Commissioners Have Short Selectman G. W. Spaulding of Lexington, Will Retire from Official Duties -Two Years of Service Prove Him to be First Class.

politicians to begin laying wires and making plans with more or less haste.

Mr. Spaulding was elected two years ago in a very close vote, receiving 340 votes as against 338 for Charles A. Fowle, a majority of two. He has proven a first class town official and has maintained the respect of all, notwithstanding the fact that during his term of service some very complex and exciting issues have very complex and exciting issues have been dealt with by the board. He will retire with the good wishes of his fellow townsmen, and with the satisfaction of having had the honor of serving as sejectman of Lexington.

NEITHER WAS A PASSEN-

Concerning the two men who were run over last week Wednesday, the management of the Boston Elevated Railway makes the following statement of facts in relation to each case:
"Neither of the persons injured was passenger, and neither of the accidents occurred at the stations of the company, nor did they result from the methods of handling passengers at the stations. James Donovan, an employe of the company, was walking with other members of the crew to which he belonged, upon the walk beside the tracks near Corning street, south of, and some distance from, the Pleasant street station, a little after 7 o'clock in the morning, carrying over his shoulder a pair of rail tongs, when, in some way, the tongs were struck by a north-bound train, and he was knocked down and pushed to within about 500 feet of the station.

The other accident, resulting in the death of William Callahan happened

The other accident, resulting in the death of William Callahan, happened near the North station. As nearly as ean be determined from the investigation made, Callahan had in some way gained access to, and was a trespasser upon, the structure, where he was struck by a train, north-bound, about 330 feet south of the North station, and dragged as far as the platform, where his body fell to the street below. In neither case can the company be justly criticised for want of proper foresight and precaution."

BAPTIST SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

The Baptist Sunday school held its merry Christmas festival in Grand Army hall, last week Thursday evening. The children were out in full numbers, and the older grown were there, too. The intertainment was very pleasing. Charles S. Chadwick of Medford street, gave two select readings, which were happily rendered. Miss Edith Stone, of Malden sang sweetly two solos. Miss Annie White, of Melrose, rendered selections on the piano, while Dr. Fred Duby gave two solos on the violin. Prof. Chase of Boston, delighted the children with his feats of legerdemain. Selections on the graphophone were given by Heron the graphophone were given by Herbert Wyman.

VETERAN FIREMEN DINED.

The Arlington Veteran Firemen's association held an interesting business meeting and entertainment on Friday evening of last week, in Menotomy hall. The boys turned out in full numbers, with many of their friends from neighboring towns, After the business hour, a collation was served, and then came the stories and speeches. The speakers were Walter H. Peirce, Melville A. Haskell, Ed. Schwamb, Stephen Hicks, Charles F. Ford, Thomas Hogan, Supt. of Wires R. W. LeBaron and others.

A social hour followed, the program being under the direction of James H. Mead, chairman of the entertainment committee of the association. His assistants on the committee were James H. ### REPRESENTATIVE CROSBY ACTIVE.

Representative J. Howell Crosby, of Arlington has started on his year's work at the state house, with his usual activity. At the opening of the house, last week Wednesday morning, he offered a motion that a committee of eight be appointed to notify the secretary of state that the house had already been called to order. He was appointed chairman of the committee.

At the caucus of Republican members, previous to the opening of the legislature, Mr. Crosby nominated Rev. Daniel W. Waldron, of Boston, as chaplain of the house. He was also appointed a member of the caucus committee of 11 for 1902.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON II, FIRST QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 12.

Text of the Lesson, Acts ii, 1-21. Memory Verses, 2-4-Golden Text, Acts 11, 39-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.] 1. "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come they were all with one accord in one place." This day, called Pentecost, or "fiftieth day," is mentioned again in chapter xx, 16, and I Cor. xvi, 8, as a day to be remembered and observed and is foresnadowed in Lev. xxiii, 15, 16, in the new meal offering of first fruits fifty days after the sheaf of first fruits, the former representing the resurrection of Christ on the day after the Passover Sabbath and the latter, fifty days later, suggesting the event of our lesson in connection with the beginning of the gathering of the body of Christ from all nations. The leaven in the fiftieth day offering sets forth the sin even in the believer, for leaven is always a type of evil, but it is met by the blood of the sacrifice (Lev. xxiii, 17-21). Christ is the first fruits; we are a kind of first fruits (I Cor, xv, 23; Jas. i, 18). While the disciples of Christ waited for the promise of the Father they continued in prayer and supplication (Acts i, 4, 14), but whether the election of Matthias to fill the place of Judas was of the Lord or of Peter is a question. Some disciples still find it difficult to pray and wait without the transaction of some other busi-We may possibly find Paul and not Matthias as the twelfth. See the one accord of the Lord's people in i, 14; ii, 1, 46; iv, 24; v, 12; viii, 6; xv. 25; just seven times; the one accord of 'atan's followers in vii, 57; xii, 20; xviii, 12; xix, 29: just four times, the worldwide number, suggesting the whole world in the wicked one hating God (Rev. vii, 1; I John v, 19, R. V.; John xv, 18, 19). The word is only used once elsewhere (Rom. xv, 6), and teaches us with one mind and one mouth to glorify God. 2-4. "They were all filled with the Holy Ghost." When the Holy Spirit came upon Christ at His baptism, He came in the form of a dove, for there was no need of a purifying or consuming fire, but saved sinners need the Spirit as a fire. The saying in Isa. lxiv, 2, "The fire causeth the waters to boil to make Thy name known," taken in connection with the water as the word (Eph. v. 26), and the Spirit as fire helps us to under stand why some people who know much of the word of God seem to have no power or go in them. The water is not boiling; they need the fire of the Holy The Spirit came as the Lord Jesus said He would and took possession of these redeemed ones, His temples, and at once they began to speak, or rather the Spirit who filled them began to speak through them. See in Acts iv, 31, how when they were filled on another occasion they spake the word of God with While yet with them in His boldness. mortal body Jesus had told them, "It is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you" (Matt. x, 20). Neither the thoughts nor the words were theirs; but, as in the case of the sweet palmist of Israel, the Spirit of the Lord spake by them, and His word was in their tongue (II Sam. xxiii, 27).

5-11. Jews from all nations were gathered at Jerusalem, and quickly they came together and heard these unlearned Galileeans talking in the languages of all lands concerning the wonderful works of God. The Holy Spirit had taken full control of these men and was telling through them the things of God and of Christ as Jesus said He would (John xvi, 13-16). He who first gave different languages to people (Gen. xi, 7) can as easily cause others to speak these languages when He sees fit, and, although we do not hear of missionaries in our day acquiring a foreign language in that way, yet I am acquainted with missionaries who, in reliance upon Job xxxvi, 4, were able to speak in a foreign tongue in a very short time. One whom I know passed an examination in six months that would ordinarily require a year of study. The Spirit does not talk of the works of man, nor does He honor man, but He loves to honor God. Like the servant of Abraham when he went to obtain a wife for Isaac, He tells of the only Son and how the Father had given all things into His hand. The messenger of the Lord is not expected to think out his message and tell the people his thoughts, but he is expected to receive it from the Lord and deliver it as the Lord's message (Ex. iv, 12; Jer. i, 7; John xii, 49; I Pet. iv. 11).

prehensible, and they tried to explain it by saying that these men were full of new wine, about as silly an explanation | bushel. as is given by some of the wise and professedly devout men of our day of some of the wonderful works of God. The the now almost frozen people began to natural man, however educated or religious he may be, cannot receive the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto Him (I Cor. ii, 14), and these devout, religious Jews needed just what Nicodemus needed, a new birth, the gift of God, which many of them a little later received. That the wisdom of laid away for a few days was again this world cannot comprehend or explain brought forth and wrapped round shiverthe things of God is repeatedly shown in the book of Daniel, a book which some of the wise men seem to wish out of the Bible, perhaps because therein is shown the utter inability of the wisdom of Egypt to explain the things of God. The wise of this world are drunken, but not with wine (Isa. xxix, 9). Consider also Eph. v. 18. and some similarity between than 30 degrees. November was also exa man filled with wine and one filled with the Spirit. 16-21. Peter does not say that this was the fulfillment of that part of Joel's prophecy which he quotes, but that it was a sample of it or, if you prefer, a fulfillment, for one has truly said that prophecy may have a germinant accomplishment while the complete fulfillment is yet in the future. That Joel's prophecy has not yet had its fulfillment (if you will suffer the word) or its final fulfillment is seen in the context, for Israel is still ashamed and humiliated among the nations, and Jerusalem is not holy, for strangers still possess her, and the Lord has not yet returned to dwell in Zion (Joel iii, 17, 21). The judgment of nations (Joel iii, 1, 2), of which our Lord spoke in Matt. xxv, 31-46, has not yet taken place, for He has not yet come in His glory. When He thus comes, we will come with Him to be associated with Him in judging the nations (Col. iii, 4; I Cor. vi, 2; Rev. ii, 26-28). Let us be filled with the Spirit and be His faithful witnesses till He come,

THE PECULIAR WEATHER THAT MADE 1816 A PHENOMENON.

No Summer Except What Little Came In December-In New England the Year Was Called "Eighteen Hundred and Starve to Death."

European and American data represent the year as having been phenomenal in almost every particular. In New England the year went by the name of "eight een hundred and starve to death," the summer months are known in history as "the cold summer of 1816," so remarkable was the temperature.

The sun's rays seemed to be destitute of heat, and all nature was clad in a sable hue. Men and women became frightened and imagined that the fire in the sun was being rapidly extinguished and that the world would soon come to an end. Ministers took the phenomenon for entific men talked of things they knew not of, while the fanatics took advantage of the occasions to form religious organizations.

The winter of 1815-16 was very cold in Europe, but comparatively mild in this country, and did not in any way indicate the severe weather that soon prevailed. Even the almanacs were silent, and, although the usual indications "about now look out for cold weather" or "this is a good time for snow" were entered in the regular portions of the book devoted to the winter predictions, those used for chronicling the pleasanter months had no such alarming warnings.

January was mild, so much so that for days the people allowed their fires to go out, as artificial heat made the buildings uncomfortably warm. This pleasant weather was broken by a severe cold snap in February, but this low temperature passed in a few days, and a warmer condition similar to the month previous set in. March "came in like a lion, but went out like a lamb." There was nothing unusual in the climatic conditions of the month which differed from those generally found in the windy season. April was the advance guard of this strange freak in temperature. The early days were warm and bright, but as the month drew to a close the cold increased until it ended in ice and snow and a very low temperature. To those who delighted in balmy May days and loved to watch the budding flowers the May of 1816 was a bitter disappointment. True, buds came, but so did the frost, and one night laid all vegetation a blackened waste. Corn was killed, and the fields had to be made ready for another planting, but the people's astonishment was complete when they found ice formed to the thickness of half an inch in the pools. June, the "month of roses," was this year a month of ice and desolation. The "oldest inhabitant" was surprised, for never before had the mereury sunk so low in the tube in these latitudes in the last month of spring. Frost, ice and snow were common. Almost every green thing that had taken advantage of a few warm days to develop was killed, and various kinds of fruit were nearly all destroyed. One day the beautiful snow fell to a depth of ten inches in Vermont, seven inches in Maine and three inches in Massachusetts and cen-tral New York. Matters were beginning to be interesting. People were undecided whether to spend the winter in the south or at the seashore and mountains. One day the latter resorts were desirable, and the next would decide in favor of the former, but on the whole the southern clime was preferred.

July was accompanied by frost and ice, and those who celebrated the glorious Fourth "not wisely but too well" found an abundance of ice handy for immediate use the next morning. It was not very thick, not more than one-sixteenth of an inch, but it was ice, and it caused the good people of New England, New York and some sections of Pennsylvania to look grave. That month Indian corn was destroyed in all but the most favored locations, and but a small quantity escaped.

Surely August would put an end to such cold weather, but the farmers as well as hotel proprietors were doomed to disappointment. The midsummer month was if possible more cheerless than the days already passed. Ice formed even thicker than it had done the month before, and corn was so badly frozen that it was cut for fodder, and almost every green plant in this country as well as Europe was frozen. Papers received from England stated that the year 1816 would be remembered by the generation then living as a year in which there was no summer

What little corn ripened in the unexposed states was worth almost its weight in silver, and farmers were compelled to 12-15. This supernatural occurrence provide themselves with corn grown in was to these devout Jews wholly incomof 1817. This seed never cost so much. being difficult to get even at $5 per

> The last month of summer was ushered in bright and warm, and for two weeks thaw out. It was the mildest weather of the year, and just as the inhabitants got fairly to appreciate it old Boreas and Jack Frost came along and whitened and bardened everything in their path. On the 16th ice formed a quarter of an inch thick, and winter clothing that had been ing humanity. By this time the people had given up all hopes of again seeing the flowers bloom or hearing the birds sing and began to prepare for a hard

October kept up the reputation of its predecessors, as there was scarcely a day that the thermometer registered higher tremely cold, and sleighing was good the All orders left with F. R. Daniels will first week of the month; but, strange to relate, December was the mildest and most comfortable month of the entire year, a condition which led many people to believe that the seasons had changed

Of course the cold spell sent breadstuffs to an unheard of price, and it was impossible to obtain for table use many of the common vegetables, as they were required for seed. Flour sold in 1817 in the cities for $13 per barrel, and the average price of wheat in England was 97 shillings per quarter .- Boston Globe.

ELEVATED OR SUBWAY.

The brief message which Mayor Dickinson sent to the city government in relation to the rapid transit problem, will doubtless have the effect of further crystallizing public sentiment and directing public endeavor along the lines suggested by him. 'Ine mayor and his associates are deserving of credit for the skillful manner in which they have handled a situation that required the most extreme delicacy to avoid clashing in interests and views among those most directly concerned in the outcome. The plan is sufficiently outlined to afford a basis of discussion, and is undoubtedly the only one that could have resulted from the circumstances surrounding the situation. The message amounts to this: A subway is the only practicable substitute for an elevated road. An elevated road must be built unless the city and company agree upon a plan for a subway which the legislature will sanction. The company seems disposed to co-operate with the city, provided that the terms and obligations governing the building of a subway are not more burdensome than those at present imposed. The mayor believes that a subway will not prove to be a more expensive enterprise than the building of an elevated road. The subway possesses most of the advantages and eliminates many of the disadvantages of an elevated line.

The message is exactly in line with the suggestions made by the Chronicle from time to time, and without doubt expresses in a general way the nearly universal sentiment of the city. It has been feared that the expense of building a subway would be so much greater than that required for the construction of an elevated line, that the railway company might on that account hesitate to agree to a change in the plans. If the mayor's idea that the cost of a subway will not be materially greater is well founded then one of the most serious obstacles will be removed. The committee having the matter in charge have evidently given their time and thought to good purpose, with the result that the preliminary stage is entered upon with as great promise of success as could be possible. [Cambridge Chronicle.

THE CONCORD AVENUE WIDENING.

The aidermen passed the order for the widening of Concord avenue, Tuesday evening, but in the common council it was referred to the next city government. Those who favor the widening make a very strong case, and if the matter had been reached earlier in the season, it would probably have passed. There can be no doubt that the avenue must be widened, eventually. It must become a leading thoroughfare, and should be made attractive and convenient. It can be widened now more cheaply than at a later date, when the abutting property has been improved.

The widening will aid in bringing valuable property into the market, and will stimulate its development. In these days people hesitate about building where the facilities for transportation are lacking. The tendency of the city is to grow in this direction, and with a good car service there can be no doubt that much building would follow. Every new building would be additional taxable property, to say nothing of the increase of land valuation. We believe that the improvement would pay for itself in this way within a few years. It should not be postponed. [Cambridge Chronicle

THE NEW BOULEVARD.

Gov. Crane's recommendation regarding metropolitan parks seems to settle the question of a new boulevard from Middlesex Fells to the Charles river this year. One of his objections to new work is that the apportionment of expenses for work done in the past has not been settled, on account of the appeals made from the decision of the commission. This objection will probably be removed before another year has passed, and the municipalities will begin to re-imburse the state for its expenditures.

The appointment of Capt. Hugh Bancroft as assistant district attorney is a gratifying one. He is young-one of the youngest men who ever held the position-but has an exceptional record, and, coming from good stock, can hardly fail to do good work.

At Santiago, New Year's day, the Cuban baseball team beat the Cubans. The duty on Cuban baseball players should be reduced, that American audiences may see some good playing.

There is need to go far to find a soldier and veteran of the Spanish war worthy to be compared with the most famous in the country. for the bold act by medals from congress, Mr. Scott showed the reporter his medal, which reads "For Heroism and Gallantry, while under the of the enemy, Joseph F. Scott, corporal U. S. Marine Corps, U. S. S. Nashville, cutting cables at Clenfuegos, Cuba, May II, 1898." On the reverse side is Minerva repulsing Discord. This medal is made from the gun metal of the old ship Constitution. The operation which congress deemed worthy of a medal was in truth bold to the verge of recklessness. The party had to go out from the Nashville in a small boat to within 100 feet of the shore, where, constantly under fire of some 2000 Spanish soldiers in the fort, they had to saw through a cable incased in two inches of steel. Mr. Scott had to take his post in the rear of the boat, which part was nearest the shore, and then "blanket" the fire of the enemy by himself keeping up a constant shower of shot on the fort. His work was so energical and the Spanlards such poor marksmen, that of the expedition of 25 only four were killed and eleven wounded. Mr. Scott never received a scratch.

But, although this may be regarded as his greatest exploit, it was but a fragment of the service which he was to cender the country before retiring. He served on the Nashville from August 21, 1897, till July 31, 1890, and the Nashville, for the bold act by medals from con-

ASK THE USE OF CAMBRIDGE LAND.

Selectmen from the town of Lincoln appeared before the Cambridge water board last week to ask that they be permitted to carry a proposed new town way through some land in their township which is owned by this city in connection with its water supply. The town proposes to lay out a special town way from the Lexington line to the Concord line on which an electric road may be established and which shall be devoted to the uses of such road alone. This way is not to along the Concord turnpike because it is too narrow throughout and the grades are rather difficult. The town, too, wishes that its public roads be not usen by any electric line.

The engineer engaged by the town to lay out a route for the road to go over chose one which is but 600 feet longer than the regular turnpike, although it seems to represent a considerable detour, and which avoids all the grades but one. But this route goes through a strip of land, in several sections, in all some 2900 feet long, which belongs to this city. The right of eminent domain does not extend to land owned by another town so Lincoln has to ask the permission of this city before it can go on with its town way. On this errand the selectmen came Tuesday evening, and stated their case before the board. They were pretty

Tuesday evening, and stated their case before the board. They were pretty closely questioned by the representatives of this city, but seemed to show that no harm would be done to the water supply and that the route they desired was the only feasible one. In order to protect the water supply Cambridge has gone to some expense purchasing land in the vicinity which might be a source of pollution, and, of course, moves cautiously in granting any such permission as the town of Lincoln asks. The board took the matter under consideration.

WOMAN'S COSTUMES.

By Josephine Robb.

Velvets are to the front. Last winter they were well liked but this year they are universally popular. Perhaps even more fashionable are the suits of velveteen and corduroy. Every well appointed outfit now includes a gown of this rich yet durable material, which is usually plain and tailor made. In fact velveteen has almost superseded cloth for the walking costume. Plain stitched bands form an effective trimming for these gowns. A handsome street costume of tan broadcloth is shown here. The Prince Albert coat is completely covered with applique embroidery of tan taffeta and panne velvet, worked with Corticelli Filo silk. The broad collar and revers are of tan panne edged with three blas folds of the tan, red and black velvet. These same bias folds of velvet appear on the cuff of the Paquin sleeve and at the hem of the skirt, the black velvet being the lower fold. This accenting of the hem of the skirt with shades of the trimming is one of the new features of the winter gowns. The undersleeve consists of a puff of tan chiffon, covered with heavy lace, and ending in a straight cuff over the hand of panne velvet edged with the triple folds. A knot of tan chiffon and lace at the throat completes this thoroughly artistic and up-to-date costume.

An exquisite dinner gown is this imported from the Paris house of Sara Meyer. The material is pastel blue satin soleil made over a white taffeta lining. The skirt is trimmed with a series of transverse tuckings, termed the sunburst, interspersed with insertions of rare lace. There is a fan-shaped circular flounce ornamented with insertions and tucking. The bodice is also tucked and is partially covered with a 'aunty bolero trimmed with the insertions of lace. The sleeves are tucked and tight-fitting to the elbow, while the undersleeves of white chiffer are puffed out in the balloon shape seen in the new gowns. The collar is of lace with a huge chou of chiffon at the back. In copying this beautiful costume the best results will be obtained by using Corticelli silk.

The knell of the separate waist has often been sounded yet it still survives and flourishes. Truly, it is too convenient and often attractive a garment to be easily dispensed with. A charming theatre bodice—one of Corne's creations—is of white glace taffeta, stitched in red and trimmed with Persian silk. In this model the broad, turnover sailor collar is of the Persian taffeta with a wide border the color of watermelon. The blouse is laced across the front with silk cord and tasflounce ornamented with insertions

The sleeves broaden below the elbow and there is an undersleeve of white chiffon with cuff of velvet and lace. On all fancy bodices Corticell spool silk insures a correct finish. The sailor blouse, slightly puffed at the waist, is quite popular. Large collars and revers decorate nearly all bodices and help to give the broadshouldered efwaist, is quite popular. Large colliars and revers decorate nearly all bodics and help to give the broadshouldered effect which is desired in the fashionable figure. The extremely long waisted effects of the past season are now a bit modified, but a decided dip is still given to the waist line in all modish gowns. A variation in this style has recently appeared in an imported model, the widebelt of which is shaped in a sort of square, back and front.

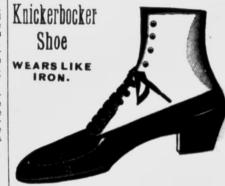

Irish crochet lace is extremely fashionable. A beautiful gown made of this rich material is hung over drop skirts of chiffon and liberty satin, and is trimmed with bands of black thread lace. The skirt clings closely to the figure, spreading in a circular flounce at the foot. The

"I DON'T CARE."

Well, if you don't care, who do you suppose does? You may be sure no one will care for you. In many ways the business life of the world is a cold matter-of-fact. It is too much "each man for himself while the devil takes the bindermost." We must take things as we find them. We must, each man of us, fight our own battles, or otherwise make a cowardly surrender. "I don't care" has no place in the business world; indeed, it has or should have no place in any department of life. It is our first business to care for what most nearly concerns us. We have all got to make our own bed, and more than this we've

MAYOR COLLINS'S INAUGURAL MES-SAGE.

Mayor Collins' inaugural message to the city council of Boston is an admirable paper, brim full of an intelligent understanding of his official duties. The mayor indulges in no flights of oratory, but proceeds at once to the discussion of municipal affairs. He points to the somewhat startling fact that Boston's indebtedness, per capita, is more than double that of any other city. While the mayor says in an exceedingly courteous way that Boston has likely been making more improvements than any other one city, still he insists that her enormous debt needs explanation, and to this end he has secured an expert accountant to go over the books kept, and to be kept. With a full sense of justice and fair play, mayor Collins declares that the city should ask for no loans for purposes of temporary use. The entire message is irdicative of a business administration under Mayor Collins.

OUR POLICE FORCE.

The Enterprise has frequently written of Arlington's police force because every man of its, number deserves a good word Our police force is faithful in all its manfiold duties, and to it Arlington is indebted for her quiet and good order. Chief Harriman, known to all Arlington as one of the most agreeable of men, has had an unusually hard and anxious year of service. The Swan defalcation brought to him the severest test of endurance in work that must have weighed upon him, and the effect of his incessant labor he is feeling today. The board of sciectnen should generously give Chief Harriman a vacation of at least six weeks, so that he may have a needed rest. We'll venture that Arlington will say "amen" to an immediate proposition on the part of the selectmen that Mr. Harriman shall at once pack his gripsack and hie away for six weeks, where he can for a brief while be beyond sight and sound of the policeman's rattle.

THE LENGTHENING DAY.

The lengthening day is always prophetic of the warmer months of the season. It is to our delight that we already recognize that the sun is delaying a bit in its going down. The twilight, that most enjoyable hour of the day, is somewhat prolonging itself before the night comes on. The good old lady said with a grateful heart that sne could see the lengthening of the day by two min- know always what to expect of the man utes in her knitting. Well, we all like to see the days lengthen, even if the cold does strengthen. While there is much about the winter season that one may enjoy, still it is in the summer-time that we most revel. It is a delicious memory to us, now that the winter-time has all nature in its icy grip, to think of the grand old mountains in the full burst of the summer-time, or amidst the more regal splendors of the autumn season. However, we are not complaining; each of the seasons has its advan-Yet in this uncertain northern latitude we vote for the glad summer-

WHAT A MEAN ADVANTAGE!

How mean and cowardly for one to take advantage of his size, and yet it is largely on this fact that many a father and mother maintain their discipline in the household. Why not give the boys and girls an equal chance in all instances? The children have rights that we are bound to respect, and it should not be forgotten that they are co-partners in the family life. It is hardly less than wicked that the children are so often put aside without a why or a wherefore. We speak for the boys and girls. We are on their side every time. They deserve a front seat for they are by far the best part of the human kind. The sensible father and mother when company is being entertained will let the children come to the table, and enjoy themselves with the guests. Let the old er ones do the waiting if anyone must wait. There never was a more mistaken idea than that "children should be seen and not heard." They should have their say as well as we older grown. That "I am bigger than you" has no place by right in family or school government.

THE ENTERPRISE AGAIN.

The Enterprise never makes any apol-

It claims the privilege of always being heard, and what is an exceedingly pleasant fact to us, it is always heard. In its news columns the items always appear in an original way, while they are items of such importance that the public is interested in them and instructed thereby. The Enterprise doesn't deal in what is known in the newspaper world as "chips." It doesn't much care whether one paints his front fence white or red, neither is it especially interested in the fact that Mr. So-and-so has gone out of town to spend the night. The Enterprise, however, delights in giving its readers substantial news. And we may properly add that its editorials are in no way a rehash on current topics of what has already appeared in the metropolitan papers. Our editorial column is original with the Enterprise, and upon subjects of immediate interest to the ccal public; and this fact is cheerfully recognized by our readers. As we have said in a previous issue the Enterprise for the coming year will occupy a larger field than heretofore. There will be no interest attaching to Arlington, Lexington and Belmont that will escape its no-These columns will never hesitate o suggest whatever may be for the welfare and growth of this trio of towns. A manly, plucky journalism will never talk in riddles. It will say what it means, and it will mean what it says. Even the inattentive reader will not be compelled to guess at its meaning. Again the Enterprise has no "favored few" on its subscription list. It handles no one with kid gloves. Its hand-shake is with the bare hand. Its motto is, as we have many times said before, "the greatest good to the greatest number." We have nothing to do with the "blue book." We confidently expect to see our already large subscription list in Arington, Lexington and Belmont more than doubled within the next few months. Don't forget that the Enterprise stands for all that is progressive and up to date. True to its high calling it never shows the white feather. The Enterprise is emphatically the people's paper. Send us your dollar and fifty cents and so have ome with it weekly the New York Tribune Farmer.

TIME WASTED.

It is not a little surprising how much time is wasted in useless, senseless talk and this, too, among business men. There are those who seem altogether incapable of doing a business errand or giving an order, without stopping to tell some fish "Time is money," said some wise philosopher, and he was justified in the saying. No man is right in robbing another of his valuable time. "Do your errand and be off" should be the motto ness house. We have been bored well nigh to death many and many a time and so have you, with that man who is all mouth and with little or no brains. We mean that man who has no conception of the fitness of things. Deliver us, of something and must tell it. We greatly admire that father and son who wrote each other as follows: The son's letter was after this fashion: "Dear Father, I am going to be married," and the father's reply was in this wise 'Dear Son, Do it." Why not say what you have to say in as concise a way as possible? Why stop the whole machinery of a business house by relating at tedious length some story in which no one is interested save yourself? And then your proverbial story teller has so many ollaterals to bring in as he goes along with the main subject, that your only salvation is to deafen your ears and run. It is not long ago that we listened with assumed and idiotic Christian patience to one of these "that reminds me" and followed closely, in an experimental way, the narrator as he told of the wonderfu experiences he had had in his short life When through, we added the several dates on which he had done this, that and the other, and we found his age must be something more than two hundred and fifteen years. We were not surprised at this, for the man who is always talking must of necessity do a good deal of lying, for truth is so preclous and scarce an article that one cannot retail it out from morning until night in a vocabulary of meaningless words. We know of men and women when it would have been a blessing to the world had they been born dumb. We have more than once made our way with more than lightning speed from that man whose favorite occupation it is to buttonhole every man he meets on the street or elsewhere, and then open on him his speaking battery. You may who stops you on your hurried way that he may say something to you. He is bound to tell you of his grandfather in the earlier wars, and he will in no in stance fail to tell you of the distinguished relatives he has on his mother's side. It doesn't matter of whom you have heard, for he has seen that very And so he goes on ad infinitum. Before he unloosens his hold upon you, he will be likely to tell you of his remarkable conversion, so like that of the Apostle Paul. These word-mongers are a nuisance wherever found, and he who survives their onslaught should be pensioned by the government.

A DISTINGUISHED EDUCATOR.

If the term "education" holds to its derivative meaning "the leading out of the man," then is Booker T. Washington not only a distinguished educator. but the most distinguished educator of all. Tuskegee college stands today at the head and front of all our collegiate institutions and universities in the land, for there it is that they make practical men and women. One has only to read the autobiography of Dr. Booker T. Washington to become convinced that in all educational training he has learned that lesson of all lessons that to make the most of a man out of the boy, and to make the most of a woman out of the girl, is or should be the crown and glory of all educational work. It isn't enough to affirm that Booker T. Washington is doing today more for the colored race than is any other man, for the truth is, he is doing more for the human race without regard to color than is any other man or woman. This second Washington is as much of a pronounced leader as was the first Washington. It is fortunate, indeed, that Booker T. Washington has not been spoiled by the many false incentives put torth in our public schools and in our higher instituegy for so frequently writing of itself. Itions of learning. The so-called ranking system of the schools has never come into his multiplication of intellectual forces. He has learned his lesson for what there was in it. His sleeping under the sidewalk of one of the streets of Richmond was part of his preparatory course. Making his way to the school at Hampton, hungry and footworn, was the objective outcry, "prepare ye the way," and then that student life of his during all those four years of study evinced that magnificent and triumphant spirit which was bound to overcome all obstacles in the way. Where there was no way over the Alps, then he said as did Napoleon, "I'll make one," and he did make one. From the smallest beginnings at Tuskegee this prince of educators has built up an institution of learning that is attracting the admiration of the world. From his registry of a half dozen pupils Tuskegee college now numbers 1400 boys and girls or young men and women, who are greatly inter ested and in earnest. Instead of one teacher this college now has a faculty of nearly a hundred instructors, and instead of a shanty and a henhouse, the college owns eight hundred acres of land and 44 buildings, and all this, be it remembered, has been accomplished largely through the individual efforts of Booker T. Washington. And yet there are a few of those, and let it be said to our shame, who declared that President Roosevelt had belittled himself and the nation by dining this apostle of humanity at the white house. Why, the supreme fact is this: Booker T. Washington honored the president and the American people by accepting the invitation of the chief magistrate to dine at the home of the nation. Mr. Objector, just reverse your reckoning and then you will be frore nearly right. The honor done comes on the other side. Dr. Washington did distinguished honor to Harvard college and to other universities, when he accepted their honorary degrees. It is a ridiculous inversion of the facts to suppose that either the nation or the university can greatly honor Booker T. Washington, when he it is who comes laden with honors secured through that masterful spirit of his, ready to bestow them upon all who will receive them. The Enterprise long ago declared itself 'for no race, creed or party." So it is that it now writes of Booker T. Washngton without any reference to his coi-We love to write the simple name Booker T. Booker T. Washington is way to the front, and he is fast bringing his race with him. Although a black man, he shines forth with all the brilliancy of a star of the first magnitude-and this is just what he is.

Speaker Myers has given Representaive J. Howell Crosby a place upon two important committees, namely, on the ommittee on ways and means and on that of the public service, the last being an especially important committee. The chairmanship of one of the committees was offered Mr. Crosby, but he much preferred his position on the committee of public service.

Representative Creeley is given important places on the committees on printing and street railways.

ELEVATED RAILROAD.

The following extract is made from the fourth annual report of President Bancroft, of the Boston Elevated Railway fourth annual report of President Bancroft, of the Boston Elevated Railway Co.:

To the Stockholders of the Boston Elevated Railway Company:—In submitting their report for the year ending September 30, 1901, your directors are glad to sav that the operation of the elevated road from Dudley street, Roxbury, to Sullivan square, Charlestown, by way of the subway, was begun on June 10, and of the part called the Atlantic avenue loop on August 22. Operation was begun with three-car trains, controlled by the multiple unit system, each car seating 45 persons, having two 150 horse power motors and air brakes. Since then four-car trains have been in operation between terminals through the subway, and two-car trains on the Atlantic avenue loop. Before the elevated road was opened, in the opinion of experts, to meet the probable traffic, sixty cars were said to be enough, but it was deemed prudent to supply one hundred cars; besides these, fifty more cars have been ordered. Many delays occurred during the first few weeks of operation, due chiefly to the newness of the trains and signal apparatus, to the large number who wished to ride, to the unfamiliarity of the trainmen in handling crowds of such magnitude, and to the severity of the conditions of operation in going from the subway curves; but due largely to the precautions which the company saw fit to take to guard against accident. Safety was made of the first importance and the immunity from injury which passengers have had shows that the company was justified. The increase in traffic revenue during the months in which the elevated road was in operation, as compared with the increase in the corresponding months of the previous year, was 8.57 per cent as against 3.54 per cent. The average increase for the corresponding months of the three previous years was 4.47 per cent. The average increase for the correspond ing months of the three previous years was 8.57 per cent as against 3.54 per cent. The average increase for the corresponding months of the three previous years was 4.47 per cent.

Notwithstanding that the elevated system did not work at first with precision, it has given from the outset genuine rapid transit. Not only has the running time between terminals been reduced by one-half, but the delays and obstructions invariably incident to surface travel ceased to vex. From the first the trains have been well filled, and the marked abandonment of parallel surface lines for the elevated road has proved conclusively its popularity with the traveling public. Many of the defects which appeared and which had not been anticipated because of the extraordinary nature of the conditions, have been remedied. The track, signal and train apparatus his been readjusted; trainmen have been taught to meet new situations, and further provision has been made for the accommodation of patrons, so that at the close of the fiscal year the system was working with much greater smoothness and the train movement had become reasonably certain. Still further improvements will be made where it is feasible to make them, calculated to inspeedy transportation of passengers.

During the year the company increased its motive power by putting into service two engines of large size, each of 4.650 horse-power, operating a 2.700 kilowalt generator, at the Lincoln power station. Of these, mention was made in the second annual report. Provision has been made for two other engines and generators of corresponding size, one at the Lincoln power station and one at the Charlestown power station and one at the Charlestown power station. When these are installed, the company will have a motive power of 55.316 horse, or 36.944 kilowatts, at normal capacity capable of sustaining an overload of 15 per cent for hours of 5,542 kilowatts in addition, so that under stress the generators ought to supply power to the amount of 63.612 horse, or 42.486 kilowatts.

The use of horses as the motive power for stre been used to draw cars for nearly forty-

for street cars was given up by the company on December 24 1900. Horses had been used to draw cars for nearly forly-five years.

The company has continued its liberal policy in the matter of free transfers and, while because of the bodily transfer to the elevated, it cannot be told precisely, it is estimated that the number transferred was about seventeen millions greater than that of last year, or a total of over sixty-five millions. The company has continued to extend its surface lines and during the year 18.7 miles of surface track have been built, so that the surface track operated by the company is now 392.8 miles, and the elevated track 15.5 miles. The surface roadbed of the company has been maintained in thorough repair; renewals, both of the straight track and of the special work (switches, frogs, curves, etc.), have been with the most approved and substantischaracter of materials. To the surface equipment were added 100 twelve-bench open cars of the company's standard pattern, of which 60 were built in the company's shops at Bartlett street: 25 long box cars of the standard pattern; 24 electric snow-plows; 50 snow sleds, and 400 motors. A new carhouse has been built at Watertown and another at Arilington Heights.

By provision of the legislature and pursuant to the order of the board of railroad commissioners, the company has equipped all the box cars to the number of 36, run from its Neponset carhouse, with vestibules, so that the question of the danger of operating cars so equipped in the streets of Boston may be determined by the railroad commissioners.

THE NEW JOURNALISM?

The Enterprise feels it is necessary to explain to its readers, and particularly those in Lexington, why a letter from Turkey, given in this week's issue, was not printed last week as was requested and promised, and how instead it came to be printed in the Lexington Indepen-The letter enclosed in an Enterprise printed envelope was delivered at the Independent office by mistake. The next day a man returned the letter to its owner, saying he had not seen the address on the envelope until after he had opened it, so wished to return it, and then added that he had made a copy of the letter for the Independent. The letter was later sent to the Enterprise of fice, but came so near the end of the week that it was crowded out by earlier copy, and that is the reason why the Independent "scooped" the Enterprise for the first time. The Enterprise is willing to admit if the claim is made, that the Independent man misunderstood the bearer of the letter when inquiry was made for the editor of the Enterprise. It is willing to overlook the opening of the envelope, if it was done before reading the printed address; but to copy a communication addressed to another paper, and then print it, is a premeditated steal, pure and simple, and one to which 1. journalist would sink. At any rate this kind of journalism is new to the Enterprise and a kind which it is hard to believe any newspaper man would attempt. Even when the facts, as above given, were written to the Enterprise, it could hardly be believed, but it was verifled later by a personal interview. If our contemporary is in sore straits for sufficient news to fill up its columns the Enterprise might be willing to help it out occasionally, but we would prefer to make the selection ourselves, rather than allow it to take the first choice from our correspondence.

The Enterprise does not make reckless charges or baseless insinuations of bribery against other papers, such as have been covertly hurled at the Enterprise by its jealous rival, but when it makes an accusation it states the facts to sup-

In the evening, Percy A Atherton president of the Natonal Religious union, led the guild, Rev. C. A. Staples and a large number of the Lexington guild were present. Mr. Atherton took for his subject, "Forward." He spoke of the good the societies of young people were doing in building up churches. He put the meaning of the societies into three words—iruthful service-worship. Rev. C. A. Staples offered prayer for the work done by the young people. Miss E. Corinne Locke sang a solo, and the chorus was by a quartet of young ladies.

TOWN MEETING CALLED.

A town meeting is announced to Lexington voters for Monday evening. Jan. 20, at 7.30 o'clock, to take further action relative to the new high school building. The article of interest reads as follows: "To see if the town desires to substitute stone and metal for wood (in whole or in part) in exterior finish of the new high school building, and if so to make an appropriation therefor and to provide for borrowing the money, or act in any manner relating thereto."

It is believed there will be a strong movement in favor of the plan, although many are opposed to any additional expense.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

For those who are fond of a draina that aopeals directly to the heart, and though pathetic in its general tenor is withal a clean comedy drama, "The Fatal Wedding," which is the attraction at the Grand Opera house next week, should prove of interest. The scenes of the piay are laid in New York, and the various incidents it contains are all based upon life in the great metropolis. From the rise of the curtain until the final fall, the interest of the auditor never flags, and as pathetic scenes and startling climaxes pass in rapid succession, here and there is interspersed comedy of no mean order, which materially lightens the heavier parts. heavier parts.

BOSTOCK'S ANIMAL ARENA.

The people of Boston and vicinity have come to recognize Boston's Animal Arena, in the Cyclorama building, on Tremont street, as a local institution, and crowded houses prevahed at every morning afternoon and evening performance during the week. The exhibition has certainly caught the town.

One of the notable features during the week was the great number of school children present, accompanied by their teachers, the South End mission alone sending 150 children. The manner in which the little ones enjoyed the rides on the camels, dromedaries, elephants, pomies and burros was a sight that pleased the adults as much as it did the children themselves. The privilege of riding on these docile animals is an experience which even adults like to enjoy, and during intermissions many ladies, under the pleasing pretext of caring for their little charges, ascended the mammoth howdah on the great elephant, Big Liz, one of the most intelligent, as well as the largest pachyderm ever trained for public performances. The rides on these trained animals have been absolutely free of charge, and will be continued during this week.

A fresh importation of untrained lions has been received, and they, as well as polar bears, will be put through reliminary training during the intervals between the morning, afternoon and evening performances. The people of Boston and vicinity have

ARLINGTON BUILDER.

O. B. Marston. carpenter and builder, settled in Arington in 1865. He is a native of Maine, but worked for eight years at his trade with a well known bui'der in Boston before coming to Arlington to enter the employ of E. Stover, who died last fall. Of Mr. Marston's enterprise and progressiveness in Arlington nearly a hundred buildings bear witness. Almost all the houses in the vicinity of his residence on Swan's place and many on Swan street were erected by him, and he is better thin ever prepared to build more, being equipped with experience and business facilities equal to few if any in the building line today. Of Mr Marston's reliability an incident coming under our observation recently demonstrates ample proof. He had engaged to build a house for an Arlington man. About the time he began work, the owner came to him and said: 'Mr Marston I am going down east for the summer and you may have your job completed, or nearly done, before I return. You will want some money and I had better leave you some now," whereupon he tossed a roll of cash .o Mr. Marston and, after wishing him good luck, departed. The builder thought his patron's conduct a trific out of the ordinary and a little later investigated the roll of long green. It contained just $2500. Mr. Marston one day last week admitted the truth of this statement; he also remarked that the construction of the house was "an honor job" throughout. There may be many builders around in whom confidence to a like extent could be placed without fear of loss, but we feel safe in saying that few of them get their employer's money to handle so far in advance of progress on a contract.

LETTER FROM TURKEY.

Following are abstracts from a letter from Turkey, written by Mrs. Clara Hamlin Lee. It was read at the meeting of the Missionary circle of the Hancock church, at Mrs. C. C. Goodwin's, last week Friday afternoon.

"Gaben, Oct. 12, 1901.

"Miss Salmond and I started out Tuesday morning at 6.45. Our caravan consisted of six anignals, one for Miss Salmond, one for the zabtiye, the little orphanage pony for our cook, Partan, two load horses carrying beds and bedding, clothing, food, dishes, etc., and lastly our big Chester, whose picture you have, carrying your humble sister. It was beautiful, clear, sweet day, and we made the nine hours to Yenije Kala very easily and pleasantly. We spent the night there in the house of the aunt of Yexa, my orphan girl, whom father supported for so long. "Gaben, Oct. 12, 1901.

there in the house of the aunt of Yexa, my orphan girl, whom father supported for so long.

"Yenije Kala is a poverty stricken village. The people are ignorant and shiftless. There are about 20 Protestants in the place, but we have no preacher for them now and no building for church or school. The ruins of our church, burned in the massacre, still remain, a melancholy spectacle. We slept not in the house, which is without light or ventilation, but just outside, under a projecting roof, with a calico curtain hung up to ensure privacy.

"We started early the next morning for a seven or eight hours' stretch to Shivilgi. The first part of the road was very rough, up and down over steep mountains and valleys. We walked many stretches, leading our horses, as they slipped and scrambled over rocks and stones. The poor load horses had a hard time. The loads were badly put on, and had to be adjusted over and over, and the horses made such slow progress that we feared we should not reach Shivilgi that day.

"We missed the road once, and lost a we feared we should not reach Shivilgi that day.

"We missed the road once, and lost a half hour hunting for it. After a short rest I was mounting my horse in rather a steep place, when the stirrup strap broke and I fell directly under the horse. I was up again in a flash and was not hurt though startled. The last part of the day's trip was more prosperous, so that we reached Shivilgi in good time after all.

after all. "Soon after we got there it began to rain hard and we were thankful not to be on the road. I have spoken of the difficulties, but haven't told you of the heauties of the country. The mountain scenery was very beautiful that whole day. It was a delight to see such thickly wooded mountains and the soft, rich tints added their loveliness to the scenery.

"All along the way the rich foliage, the ferns, and moss-covered rocks were a de-light to the eyes, and as we neared Shi-vilgi we came to a very beautiful, dash-ing roaring little river, broken by rapids and little waterfalls. It ran in and out and little waterfalls. It ran in and out in tortuous course among the mountains and in one place we passed a precipitous cliff hanging over the river, on the summit of which are the ruins of a castle cnce occupied by an Armenian king.

"All the four villages we have yet visited. Yenigi, Kala, Shiviigi, Boondock and Geben, were completely destroyed in the massacre, every single house burned, Some of them are now better built and more comfortable than formerly. Shiviigi has broken up now into four or five more comfortable than formerly. Shivilgi has broken up now into four of five little villages, one or two or three miles apart. This makes it very difficult to do missionary work among them. We have a teacher here, but, of course, his work can be only in one village and the others are little better off for his being there. We staid over one day at Shivilgi and Miss Salmond rode around to the various villages and visited the four or five orban bovs who have returned to their chan boys who have returned to their

Miss Salmond rode around to the various villages and visited the four or five orban bovs who have returned to their homes there.

"There was a great fight at Shivigi at the massacre time, when the villagers resisted and finally sent off 2000 Turka who had come up against them. We were shown the historic spots where this and that event occurred. The next day, Friday, we went on to Goondook, four hours from Shivilgi. I had imagined this a very poor, wretched village, and was pleasantly disappointed in it. There are 50 or 60 house, many of them quite good for village houses, and also fairly clean. "There was an air of more thriftiness than in many other places, and the people seemed intelligent. One woman actually knew enough to ask me if I had to cross the ocean to go to my country. It is a rare thing for a village woman here to know that there is such a thing as an ocean. We saw two of our orphans here, a boy and a girl. They were neither of them bright enough for us to educate them much, but they are good, affectionate children, and they do at least appear very different from the ordinary village boys and girls.

"The people gathered around us and seemed very friendly and grateful for what we have done for their two orthans. They begged us to send them a teacher, and I am going to try and find some one to send them. From Bunduk we went to Geben the same day, reaching it in about two hours. It is quite a large village. We were comfortably lodged in the preacher's house and remained in Geben two days, over Saturday and Sunday. We find that some trades will not do in some villages, as for instance, weaving may succeed in one village but not in another.

"The people out here are very low down in the scale of humanity. They are for the most part utterly ignorant, not a person in many a village knowing how to read. They are wretchedly poor and filthy and are bound with chains, strong as iron, to all the stupid customs of their ancestors. Many of them seem to have no desire even for improvement. They are pitifully opp cres.

"The women have to keep their faces

become terrible beggars since the massacres.

"The women have to keep their faces covered, and in some villages the young women think it improper to speak at all, so if we ask them a question, they either make no answer or shake the head. The miserable priests in these villages are as ignorant and dirty as the rest of the people. All they know is to chant the Armenian service and to malign the Protestants.

"Monday morning about 8 o'clock we again mounted our horses and continued our way, stopping for lunch at a little village named Tasholook. As we spread out our edibles the people gathered around to "see the animals eat." for we are great curiosities to them. That night we spent at Geoksun, a large town where we were comfortably entertained in the house of a well-to-do Armenian.

"The next day we passed through three villages in the first three hours. From the last village we were informed that three hours more would bring us to Choorkoor-Asar, where we planned to sleep. We started at 1, but six long, weary hours passed before we reached the place. It was very dark by that time, and we had much difficulty in finding our way over ditches and bogs. Poor Miss Salmond got very nervous and tired.

"We came down one terribly steep place, which we called "Jacob's Ladder." literaily a long, winding flight of steps over rugged, precipitous rocks. Of course we dismounted and walked down, but I could not bear to watch the poor loaded horses struggling down this ladder, and I kept out of the way till I knew they were safely down. We passed a cave in the mouth of which were growing the most beautiful forget-me-nots I ever saw.

"And now we are safe at home again."

ever saw. "And now we are safe at home again, in the comforts of civilization at Marash. Our last night was spent in a tent, just outside of Furnuz, where a terrible massacre occurred in '95. Our last day on the road was rather long, ten hours on horse-back. We had hreakfast at 4.30 and reached home at 6."

A Writer Voices Public Sentiment Concerning the Improvements Made on the Boston & Albany R. R. Under the New York Central Control.

[From the Universalist Leader.] It is now just about a year since the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad company took formally changes in any respect.

During all the discussion concerning the leasing of this property, we were rather disposed to be non-commital. We fully recognized that there was no other rallway administration in the world the railway administration in the world that equalled the Vanderbilt system. On the other hand, we were all proud of the good old Boston & Albany and could not but feel a certain amount of regret, should its interests or identity be lost or changed.

As a result of the year's administra-

As a result of the year's administration, we feel that we are warranted in emphatically stating that it has been decidedly for the best of all concerned and that we can now heartly commend the course of the stockholders in having thus leased their property.

We are called upon to rather specifically refer to this because we have noticed that some journals of late have made, what seems to us an unfair criticism, possibly actuated by some personal reason, but the benefits to New England during the past year and for the future, we believe, are going to be very much more marked, because of this lease.

The New York Central people have certainly been most considerate and have moved slowly in making any changes, but what alterations they have made as regards train service and other features connected thereto, have all an in the line of improvements.

The Boston & Albany is running more trains, particularly to the West, than ever before, the running time has been accelerated, the equipment has been improved, more dining cars put on, and every proved, more dining cars put on, and everything that it has done has been in the line of improvements and in adding some of the New York Central methods, which stand for enterprise and progress, while all of us recognize what a magnificent property the Boston & Albany is and that it has justly been termed the pride of New England.

It was built up and reached its high degree of perfection, by conservative, and, possibly, old-fashioned methods, and too much praise cannot be given to its

and, possibly, old-fashloned methods, and too much praise cannot be given to its administration from first to last; but with all our pride in it and respect for its management, it cannot be again said that it was in many ways old-fashioned that it was in many ways old-fashioned and behind the times.

Conditions are radically different from what they were twenty-five years ago, and the policy that was the very best then would be behind the times in this century. We are heartly prepared to say that not only has the New York Central executive management of the Boston & Albany for the last year been to our minds more than satisfactory, and to the benefit of our New England people, but that it will continue to be so.

In the passenger denartment, which the public as travelers are most closely dentified with, there has been no change. Mr. Hanson, who was by far the most progressive and up-to-date official during the old regime, is still the general passenger agent of the Boston & Albany, with an opportunity to accomplish greater results in the interest of the travelling public, because the executive direction is more enterprising, and he is in no way held back from any progress that will tend to make the passenger department. held back from any progress that will tend to make the passenger department more popular with the travelling pub-lic.

Of course there are people who are bound to say that it was not best, and will insist that it is not so, and of course any change which may be made, particularly if it happens to strike in some way the persons themselves, is bound to cause criticisms from some source, but the New York Central railroad has built be the received relived property. up the greatest railway property in the world. Its management has been of a character to challenge the admiration of all and we believe that it is no way character to challenge the admiration of all and we believe that it is no way stating it too strongly that both as regards the stockholders and the public that they can in no way be so well taken care of as associated with and a part of the Vanderbilt system.

The old-time Boston & Albany was deserving of all praise as stated, and is today a great property, and still, as we have already referred to it here, to a more or less extent old-fashioned. For example, one of its old-time rules was that if a train was late it should not make up time; whereas it can be safely stated that there is no railway in this country or any other, that could with such absolute safety accelerate its speed under some circumstances to make up some of the time that had been unavoidably lost. It has the best road-bed of any railway in America, and its equipment has always been solid and substantial, and passengers have not been slow to appreciate the present increased advantage, that if trains have been somewhat late, that a certain latitudes allowed the engineer to make up the time brings passengers promptly in, as near as possible to the advertised time. This, especially where connections are being depended upon over other lines, is a very important matter.

We know it is the desire of the New York Central to conduct the Boston & Albany affairs to the entire satisfaction of all the New England people and they are too liberal minded to pursue any other course. They have moved slowly in making any changes, but as stated they have been entirely in the line of improvement.

Their administration of railways has certainly been marvelous conducted.

Their administration of railways has certainly been marvelous, conducted from their main point in New York, where they have no end of competition, with probably not less than eight or ten trunk lines to the West, and yet the New York Central carries of all through travel to the western cities, nearly, if not quite 70 per cent, leaving for all of their competitors, not over, if fully 30 per cent. We think this is pretty strong evidence of what has been accomplished by a successful business administration, and we feel that the wants of our own New England people cannot be better served than being a part and connection of such a great Their administration of railways has the wants of our own New England people cannot be better served than being a part and connection of such a great system, which is, to our minds, so spiendidly managed in every way.

Certainly the travelling public have been appreciative of these changes, because there never has been such a passenger business in the history of the road.

This is of course largely due to the greater enterprise, which, under Mr. Hanson's capable direction, has been made possible during the past year, but is in line with the general business policy of the New York Central system, which stands for the best in travel in every respect, progress and enterprise, and to furnish their bassengers with the very best sermice that can possibly be asked or known.

We feel, therefore, in conclusion, that as a general resume of the whole thing in connection with this matter, which has been so much discussed a subject.

as a general resume of the whole thing in connection with this matter, which has been so much discussed, a subject with which we have always kept closely in touch, that the lease as decided unon has been beneficial and advantageous, and that it would have been a mistake not to have had it consummated, and as the years go on, we are thoroughly confident that it will prove to be all the more so. Certainly no one can gainsay a better and quicker service or more progress and enterprise all along the line, which has resulted to the benefit of the public in every respect.

THE ENGINEER'S FINGER. It Nearly Caused the Blowing Up of His Locomotive.

"The closest I ever came to blowing her up," said the engineer, "was when I was firing on the C. and J. for Bill Johnson. It was my first trip on the engine. I had been braking before that, and I knew Johnson by reputation. They said he was the hardest on his firemen of any engineer on the word. He just kept them throwing in coal all the time, they said, and needed a fresh man every other trip. I didn't know whether they were telling the truth about him, but when I was told to go out with him I made up my mind that he wouldn't do me up. If he wanted her kept hot, I would keep her sizzling if I had to melt the grate bars.

"Johnson, I soon found, was a man who had little to say to his fireman. He looked like a man who expected the work to be done to his liking without having to do much talking about it. He told me when we met on the engine that it was the duty of the fireman to keep up steam, and he showed me the steam gauge. I was to keep my eyes on that. I knew that much myself, but I suppose he thought it was necessary to tell me. He said nothing more to me, and I said nothing to him. But how he did make me sweat!

"He sat on his box, with his hand on the throttle, looking out of the window, and every time I looked up his first finger was pointing at the steam gauge dial. I bent my back and poked and shoveled and shoveled and poked. The indicator was creeping around the face of the dial, and about the time I thought I had steam enough on to satisfy him and would straighten up for a breathing spell I would see him still with his hand on the throttle and his finger pointing at the dial. I was getting mad, and I can work like blazes when I'm mad. I wanted him to say something to me. If he had, I would have whipped him right there and quit the road.

"But when he wouldn't give me chance to pick a fight there was nothing for me to do but work. I saw that a lot of steam was going to waste, and I just hung one of my hooks on the valve to keen it down. Then I did send her up. I didn't know how much the boiler would stand and didn't care. That was Johnson's affair. I kept my eye on his finger, and when I saw it pointing at the dial I poked and shoveled. I could never get him to look at me. He was staring ahead every time I stopped long enough to look at him, and he had his hand on the throttle and that finger still pointing at the dial. I settled myself down at either give him enough steam or blow her up. I was melting the steel about the firebox when I heard a yell.

"'You blankety blank,' Johnson cried, what do you mean? Another minute and you would have blown us up!" "'I intended to.' I retorted, 'or make you take down that finger.'

"'You confounded ass." shouted Johnson, 'don't you know that that's a stiff finger?" "-Pittsburg Post.

Tobacco Persecutions.

Writing in "Cigarette Papers" in The People, Mr. Joseph Hatton says it is strange that America, which owes much to the cultivation of tobacco, should have been the most severe persecutor of the The magistrates in the early days of New England regarded the use of tobacco as more sinful and degrading than drinking ardent spirits to excess. It was only permitted to be planted in small quantities "for mere necessity" as a medicine and to be taken privately by old men. The Yankee's New England ancestors were not permitted to use it or buy it in a tavern. No man was allowed to take tobacco publicly nor even in his own house before strangers. Two men might not smoke together. On a Sabbath day it was forbidden to smoke within two miles of a meeting house. In some townships a medical certificate had to be procured before a man might smoke at all.

They Knew the Man.

A certain young theologian went down from Oxford to Birmingham to preach. He was one of those extremely flowery talkers who dazzle rhetorically the tender souls of the younger members of the congregation, and the elders of the church were besieged to have him down again. They at length consented; but, alas, they had forgotten his name. So they wrote to one of the professors, saying:

"Please send us that floweret, streamlet, rivulet, starlight man to preach for us next Sabbath. We have forgotten his name, but we have no doubt you will be able to recognize him."

He was recognized. He was sent. He is now pastor of the church.-London Telegraph.

NAVAL OFFICERS AS HOUSEWIVES. How They Manage to Make Small

Salaries Go a Long Way. How naval officers with salaries varying from $1,000 to $3,500 manage to maintain a degree of style seems a deep pledges, trinkets or valuables that have mystery to the ordinary citizen. Not only must a naval officer keep himself supplied with the half dozen different uniforms specified by the government, but he must be able when ashore to present a decent appearance in civilian attire, must stop ards upon his wares to catch the eye and at good hotels, must associate with civilians of social position corresponding to a better customer than a gloomy one. his own, and if he has a wife and children he must maintain them in good style. All this is made possible by that species of domestic communism known as co-operative housekeeping. The officers' mess aboard ship is an illustration of it. Each man in the combination contributes a certain sum for the purchase of sup- suvius. plies. If an officer be short of funds, he may draw two months' pay in advance. The common fund is placed in the hands of a caterer chosen from the mess, and the supplies are purchased in bulk and at the lowest possible cost.

The caterer makes careful calculations. allowing for breakage and other losses. adds a small percentage of profit and then retails his supplies at prices considerably below current rates ashore.

There are ordinarily two officers' messes below decks aboard a United States ship, the wardroom mess and the steerage mess. The latter is for midshipmen and other juniors. The captain messes alone in solemn state, and if a vessel be a flagship the admiral may have his own separate table. The cost of living in the wardroom mess is from $35 to $40 a month, exclusive of wines and cigars. All transactions are on a credit system. Whenever a bottle of wine or a cigar is ordered, the purchaser "writes a chit" of the amount. These chits are summed up at the end of the month, and payment is made either directly by the debtor or through the paymaster. No chit is given for meals, and each officer is entitled to take guests on board to breakfast or dinner as often as he will. At the end of the cruise the profits of the mess are divided pro rata among the members, and if the ship goes out of commission whatever stock of stores is on hand is either auctioned off to the officers or sold to the mess of some other ship .- New York Herald.

What an exaggeration! What a whopper! It has been disproved a thousand times. It is a clean case of air fancy. It doesn't take money to run a newspaper. It can run without money. It is a charitable institution, begging concern, a highway robber. The newspaper is a child of the air, a creature of a dream. It can go on and on and on when other concerns would be in the hands of a receiver and wind up with cobwebs in the window.

Preparing the Impromptu.

Great orators have generally refused to portant themes. Demosthenes, the king of orators, would never speak in a public meeting without previous thorough preparation. Daniel Webster when once pressed to speak on a subject of great importance refused, saying that he was very busy and had no time to master it. When a friend urged that a few words from him would do much to awaken public attention to the subject, he replied, there be so much weight in my words, it is because I do not allow myself to speak on any subject until my mind is imbued with it." On one occasion Webster made a remarkable speech without notes before the Phi Beta Kappa society at Harvard university, when a book was presented to him. After he had gone a manuscript copy of his eloquent "impromptu" address carefully written was found in the book, which he had forgotten to take away.-Saturday Evening Post.

A THACKERAY FEAST.

The Bill of Fare and a Description of the Beefsteak.

Perhaps the one feast which clings most closely to the reader's memory is that described by Thackeray in one of his charming essays, though how far this may be defined as a "feast in fiction" is a question for the casuist. The piece is, one fears, less known in these degenerate days than it deserves, and a quotation may be pardoned even by those persons of a right turn of mind who know their Thackeray. The dinner in question was eaten at the Cafe Foy, for whose locality the modern tourist will consult his Baedeker in vain. The account of this dinner is too long to quote in full, but one cannot refrain from extracting the bill of fare and the description of the beefsteak. "We

"Portage julienne, with a little puree in it, Two entrecotes aux epinards, One perdreau truffe, One fromage rolquefort,

A bottle of Nuits with the beef, A bottle of Sauterne with the partridge.

"And perhaps a glass of punch, with a cigar afterward, but this is neither here nor there. • • • After the soup we had what I do not hesitate to call the very best beefsteak I ever ate in my life. By the shade of Heliagabalus, as I write about it now, a week after I have eaten it, the old, rich, sweet, piquant, juicy taste comes smacking on my lips again, and I feel something of that exquisite sensation I then had. I am ashamed of the delight which the eating of that piece of meat caused me. G. and I had quarreled about the soup * * but when we began on the steak we looked at each other and loved each other. We did not speak; our hearts were too full for that. But we took a bit and laid down our forks and looked at one another and understood each other. There were no two individuals on this wide earth, no two lovers billing in the shade, no mother clasping her baby to her heart, more supremely happy than we. Every now and then we had a glass of honest, firm, generous Burgundy that nobly supported the meat. As you may fancy, we did not leave a single morsel of the steak, but when it was done we put hits of bread into the silver dish and wistfully sopped up the gravy. I suppose I shall never in this world taste anything so good again.' -Cornhill Magazine.

OBEYED THE JUDGE.

His Honor Was Respected Even if the Law Had Not Been.

Georgia has a stringent law forbidding its citizens to carry pistols on pain of forfeiting the weapons and paying a fine of $50 or being imprisoned for thirty days. Shortly after the passage of this enactment Judge Lester was holding court in a little town when suddenly he suspended the trial of a case by ordering the sheriff to lock the doors of the courthouse.

"Gentlemen." said the judge when the doors were closed. "I have just seen a pistol on a man in this room, and I cannot reconcile it to my sense of duty to let such a violation of the law pass unnoticed. I ought perhaps to go before the grand jury and indict him, but if that man will walk up to this stand and lay his pistol and a fine of a dollar down here I will let him off this time." The judge paused, and a lawver sitting just before him got up, slipped his hand into a hip pocket, drew out a neat ivory handled six shooter and laid it, with a dollar, upon the stand. "This is all right," said the judge, "but you are not the man I saw with the pis-

Upon this another lawver arose and laid down a Colt's revolver and a dollar bill before the judge, who repeated his former observation. The process went on until nineteen pistols of all kinds and sizes and shapes lay upon the stand, together with $19 by their side. The judge aughed as he complimented the ni delinquents upon being men of business. but added that the man whom he had seen with the pistol had not yet come up, and, glancing at the far side of the court, he continued:

"I'll give him one minute to accept my proposition, and if he fails I will hand him over to the sheriff."

Immediately two men from the back of the court arose and began to move toward the judge's stand. Once they stopped to look at each other and then, coming slowly forward, laid down their pistols and their dollars. As they turned their backs the judge said:

"This man with the black whiskers is the one that I originally saw."-New England Magazine.

His Tongue Was Safe.

A little three-year-old of Newton has frequently astonished his parents by rather witty remarks. One day recently his mother was busy preparing to go away, and Willie came into the house and made a great deal of noise running about with his heavy shoes. His mother told him she was so tired that she would like to have him go up stairs and take his shoes off and put his slippers on. Willie obeyed and, returning to the room where his mother was, talked incessantly. Several times she had to stop in the midst of her work to answer his questions. Finally her patience became exhausted, and she said: "Willie, will you stop talking? You have me crazy." He stopped a minute, then replied, "Well, you made me take my shoes off. but you can't make me take my tongue out, anyway."-Boston Her-

Ancient Mustaches.

Men with enormous mustaches really have nothing to be proud of. Rather are they to be pitied. Those of high rank among the Gauls and Britons, according to Cæsar and Diodorus, shaved the chin, but wore immense forests of tangled hair on the upper lip. The mustaches of the inhabitants of Cornwall and the Scilly isles hung down upon their breasts like wings.-New York Press.

HE MADE HER SAY "OBEY." flow a Facetious Bridegroom Caused His Bride to Take the Vow.

"I remember." said an old clergyman the other day, "that I was suddenly hard put to it to decide whether I should roar with laughter at a solemn service in the house of God or whether I should be very angry. The upshot was that I had such hard work to keep a straight countenance that I forgot to be angry at all. The incident arose in this way:

"It was in my early days in the ministry, and I was marrying a young farmer to a country lass in a backwoods church. About that time the women of America were just beginning to kick against the clause in our marriage service which makes them promise 'to love, honor and obey' their spouses. The bride in this case wanted to escape the vow, but did not have the courage to refuse utterly to take it. Instead she tried to slur the sentence when it came her turn to repeat the words after me, and she said. 'To love, honor and 'bey,' leaving out the 'o' in the hope that I would not notice the omission. But I did notice the omission and stopped.

'You must say "obey" clearly,' I announced, 'or I cannot go on.

"The bride hung her head, but a stubborn look came over her face, and I could see that it would take a lot of persuasion to make her change her mind. "'Will you not say "obey?"' I asked. "She only shook her head.

"'Come, now,' said I coaxingly, 'I will repeat the words again, and you say them "I did so, and the bride murmured,

'Love, honor and 'bey, "I looked at the bridegroom to see if he had any suggestion to make. The irrever-ent fellow actually gave me a wink. 'Try her once more, sir,' he said. 'The third time's the best. She only wants coaxing.' "The bride shot him an indignant look and exclaimed tartly, 'I'll say the same lable more. "I was getting weary of this nonsense, so I rapped out the words very suddenly and shortly, 'Love, honor and obey,' at the same time shooting out my index finger at the girl. This seemed to startle her, and with equal rapidity she began to thing over a hundred times and not a sylrepeat, 'Love, honor and'-"Just here the bridegroom gave her a sharp dig in the ribs with a huge forefinger, and the girl emitted a pained 'Oh!' But, determined not to be interrupted in what she had intended to say, she finished her own rendition of the vow without second's pause and ejaculated ''bey.' New York Tribune.

THE SMOKE CONSUMER WORKED.

That Was the Laundry's Great Objection to It.

"About a year ago," said a Chicago patent lawyer, "I secured a patent on a smoke consumer for a client of mine. He came into the office the other day, and I asked him what he was doing with his in-

"'Well,' he said, 'I haven't had much success with it. It's hard work to get a thing like that introduced. Last spring. after a lot of arguing, I got a west side laundry firm to try it, with the understanding that I was to take it out at my own expense if it didn't give satisfaction. After it had been in use a month or so I thought I'd go over and see how it was working.

'As I approached the laundry I saw that there wasn't a bit of smoke rolling out of the stack. In fact, it was almost impossible to see from the outside that there was a fire in the boiler. It made me feel mighty good to see that the thing was working so well, and I went into the office full of confidence.

"" "Well," I said to the senior partner, "how do you like your smoke consumer?" "'"I've been going to write to you about that," he replied. "We want it taken out."

"' "What's the trouble?" I asked him. "' "You agreed to take it out at your own expense if it wasn't satisfactory, you that I agreed to take it out, but I'd like to know what's the matter with it. I looked at it just now, and it seemed to be consuming the smoke all right." concerned, but since the smoke has quit rolling out of the stack a lot of our old customers seem to think we've shut down here, and they're taking their laundry somewhere else.'

"and I can't imagine where we ever got the fool idea that we ought to help stop the smoke, anyway. It would be just as sensible for a saloon keeper to go around preaching temperance."

"'So I had to take the consumer out, and I've decided to give up the idea of trying to introduce it among the laun-"-Chicago Record-Herald.

Electing the Pope.

Since the year 1059 the pope has been formally elected by the college of cardinals. The cardinals meet on the eleventh day after a pope's decease in a series of double cells in the Vatican, one of the cells being for the cardinal and the other for the secretary or chamberlain. On the twelfth day the election begins, the votes of two-thirds of the cardinals being necessary to elect the pope. All communication with the outside world or between themselves is denied the cardinals, their food being passed to them through an opening in the cell. They are not bound to elect a cardinal-only heretics or persons guilty of simony are excluded—and after an agreement of two-thirds has been reached the closing act of the election and announcement of the choice takes place in a chapel reserved for that purpose.

Correct Quotation.

If you must quote, do quote correctly Is the pen mightier than the sword? Thousands say or print, "The pen is mightier than the sword." It may be true, but if it is meant for a quotation it is not fairly given. The original lines in the play are:

Beneath the rule of men entirely great The pen is mightier than the sword.

This error has been corrected over and over again, but those who misquote seldom read what they are pretending to quote, but quote from a man who quoted from another man who-and so on. In these prevalent misquotations.-St. Nicholas

HORSESHOER, Special attention given to Over-reaching, Interfering, or Lame Horses. AT A SAVINGS BANK.

Why a Man Who Was In a Hurry fild Not Make a Deposit.

The business man who was in a hurry was standing in line at the savings bank, waiting his turn to deposit. There was only one person ahead of him, and he was congratulating himself upon this good luck. The person ahaad was a woman, and when the business man arrived she was just opening negotiations with the receiving teller.

"Now, I want to open accounts," she began, "for some little nieces and nephews of mine. It's for a present, you know." confidentially, "and I'm only going to put $5 in each book. Of course that isn't much, but"- Here the teller endeavored to get down to the business details, but in vain. "If they're real saving, as I want them to be, they'll soon make it more. Lots of rich men started with"-

"Yes, yes, madam," interrupted the teller in desperation; "of course they did. Now, what are these children's names and ages?"

she's nine-no, maybe it was eight her last birthday. What? Oh, her full name? Frances Jane, of course. How stupid of me! And then Johnnie no, John William, named after an uncle that died. He's six and just as cute as he can be. You wouldn't believe what that child"- business. Are there any more children?" "Oh, yes. There's the baby, Mildred. She's ten months old, and I thought she seemed pretty young to have a bankbook all to herself, so I'd like to take one for her and her mother together. Her mother's only my brother's sister-in-law, but she's just like an own sister to me. What? I can't do that? Well, that's funny, but you fix it according to the rules, the Way the Subtreasury In New York Is Guarded. It was a sharp faced guard in the subtreasury in Wall street who got his eye on the visitor and watched him closely to the 1 eint of annoyance. The visitor, who was there on business, had occasion to wait in the corridors of the uilding, and, not being a frequent caller there, he was unused to the customs of the employees.

"Waiting for anybody?" asked the guard, walking up to the stranger in a businesslike way.

"Yes. Why?"
"Who. please? It is my business to ask. I am one of the guards here." The stranger pricked his ears and told his business and occupation.
"That's all right, then," explained the guard. As he was walking away he was "Is all that 'show' a rule of the department or is it pure vigilance?" "No," said the guard, sweeping the broad floor between the latticed office windows; "it is not exactly a rule, but it is a common sense precaution.' "Do you expect any one to poke in here somehow and be fool enough to try to rob this place, with half a dozen armed guards sitting about?"

The question seemed to please the guard, and he unbent.

"I'll tell you how it is. I have been in this place just six years now and never yet have I gone to my post in the morning without saying to myself, "Today, maybe, something big will happen.' That, I think, is the way we all feel down here, and there is no reason why we should feel otherwise. In all the schemes that you, presumably an honest man, can suggest there is not one that would hold water in the proper looting of this place;

similarly with a million other people. "But it is the next fellow we need to watch for. The impossible has happened too often before. It can happen again. There is not a point, not even the contin-gency of sudden mob violence, which has been overlooked in the guarding of the treasury here. But what we do fear is the one single project that has been overlooked, the 'impossible.' "Here and there when strangers are asked their business in case they show a disposition to loiter they become angry. In that case they are promptly dealt with unless they explain in time, but most men see, as you did, that this is an extraordinary place and that when we inquire of people their business it is not done for our own edification."

And the guard excused himself to make the tour across the open floor space, ev-ery inch of which he could see from where he was standing. - New York Times.

LOTTA'S BIGGEST NIGHT.

Miners of Hamilton, Nev., Threw Their Riches at Her Feet.

Lotta, the actress (in private life Miss Charlotte Crabtree), left the stage at the height of her popularity for reasons never definitely stated.

Her singular influence over rough men was exemplified by an incident that occurred when she was about seventeen. In charge of her mother she was making a tour of the Nevada mining camps. She landed at Hamilton, one of the roughest camps in the territory. An expectant crowd of particularly rough miners was at the tavern to meet her when the stage drove up.

When there alighted from the stage spare, elderly lady, who was Mrs. Crabtree, and a little girl in short frocks, who was Miss Crabtree, the disappointment was loudly and vociferously expressed. However, any show was better than none, and that evening the miners fairly packed the place where the show was to take place. Two billiard tables had been pushed together to make a stage, a curtain being dropped between for purposes of retirement. At the hour set for the opening there stepped from behind this curtain on to the front billiard table a demure little creature, with skirts reaching to the knees and carrying a banio slung negligently over her shoulders. The audience was very cold. In less than half an hour, however, Lotta had every mother's son of them in a state of high wrought enthusiasm. She sang to them, danced for them and told them funny stories with tireless energy, and they encored her again and again. Finally one man in the audience, carried entirely away by enthusiasm, came down to the front with a whoop and, throwing something on the stage, cried out: "There, you can have my pile." The example was contagious. In less than a minute every man in the place was scrambling eagerly forward to divest himself of riches in order to lay them at Lotta's feet. The result of that night's work was the most profitable in the history of Miss Lotta's career on the stage either in Nevada or anywhere else.-Saturday Even-

Color Effects of the Microscopic Particles That Impreguate the Atmosphere-The Hue of the Sun and the Earth's Blanket.

Most people if they were asked to state the color of the sun would say that it was orange, and they would as confidently assert that the color of the atmosphere was blue. Recent researches and investigations, however, point to the conclusion that the real color of the sun is blue, while that of the atmosphere surrounding the earth is orange. Commonly the earth's atmosphere appears so transparent and translucent that it is hard to realize the fact that it has as much effect on the light and heat coming from the sun as if it were a roof of thick glass. But the atmosphere is very far from being as colorless as it seems to be, and the best way of discovering its true tint is not to gaze immediately overhead, but to look away toward the horizon. By so doing the atmosphere will be seen, as it were, in bulk, for overhead there is only a small accumulation of it compared with the many miles of thickness through which the vision travels when the eye looks toward the horizon.

The atmosphere surrounding the earth then may be likened to a screen of an orange color, and it will be readily understood that any light passing through this screen will experience some remarkable modifications. Now, as already stated, it appears highly probably that supposing any one could see the sun from a position outside the earth's atmosphere the light coming from this central luminary would be seen to be not white, but blue. This blue is of course not a pure monochromatic blue, and the expression really means that it sums up the dominant note in the color scheme. What, therefore, the atmosphere may be considered to do is to stop out or absorb all the colors at the blue end of the spectrum, the residue filtering through to the earth as white light. When the rays of light first left the sun, the blue rays were the strongest, but very soon after they entered the earth's atmosphere their progress was impeded, and of all the rays journeying from the sun they quickly became the weakest. On the other hand, the red rays, which at first were inconspicuous, had the facility of penetrating the earth's atmosphere and were the most in evidence at the end of their long journey.

The first step, accordingly, to be taken when investigating a sunset is to realize that the white light from the sun which is commonly supposed to be composed of the seven primary colors should rather be thought of as a residue of the original radiations. A further important point is to bear in mind that all radiations of Hight are of different wave lengths. This fact indeed is at its very foundation, so to speak, of all sunsets, and it is the prime agency by which their flaming. gorgeous tints and colors are produced.

It is due to this fact, for instance, that in the neighborhood of large towns the sun nearly always appears to set as a red ball of fire. The rays of light at the red end of the spectrum are of a much longer wave length than any of their fellow rays, and so are the best qualified for penetrating the dense bank of haze which and cities. In such localities, as the sun sinks to rest, the green rays are first absorbed by this bank of haze, and then the yellow, and, lastly, the orange and the red, the latter, more often than not, he ing the only ones to get through at all. A careful observation of a sunset will reveal the fact that the colors fade in the above mentioned order, and the reason they do so is that they are of different wave lengths. Now, the color in the sky may, as it were, be painted on the clouds, or on the hazy air, or on the open sky itself. As regards the latter, the color that is most conspicuous is of course the blue, and in seeking for the origin of this tint it will be found that the search leads to an explanation of many of the other colors. On looking up into the sky on a cloudless sunny day, when the swallows, perhaps, are flying so high that they appear but as tiny specks in the dome of blue, it seems almost impossible to think of the atmosphere as being otherwise than perfectly clear and translucent. It is, however, in reality charged with minute dusty particles, which have always been found in myriads whenever the atmosphere has been tested either over the open sea or at the top of high mountains. These particles of dust, it will be seen, are the agents principally responsi-ble for tinting the atmosphere blue and for filtering out the gorgeous hues of a

In the lower strata of the atmosphere the coarser particles of dust not only scatter the waves of light, but they also reflect them, so that at these lower levels the blue tint is diluted by white light and is accordingly not so intense as when seen, say, from the top of a high mountain. At this elevation only the finer varieties of dust are floating, and there is little reflection of the light, but much scattering, and hence it is here that the blue attains its greatest intensity. In that part of the sky nearest the sun the rays of light come in a direct line to the eye of the observer, and the scattering of the light does not appear so great as when one looks across the path of the beams, and it is due to this circumstance that the sky near the sun is not of so intense a blue as portions of the sky farther away. A similar kind of thing happens in respect to the clouds, where dust readily accumulates and, reflecting the light, produces their brilliant whiteness. At the edges of the clouds, moreover, the atoms of dust are busily engaged in refracting the beams of light, and to this cause is due that brilliant fringe of brightness which so often adorns many of the largest clouds. Not only therefore does the atmospheric dust filter out of the blue light that tints the sky, but it also fabricates the pigments that color the clouds, effects which can most readily be observed in contemplating the glories of the setting sun.-Arthur H. #### POLITICS.

MYERS A CANDIDATE.

The conferences between Speaker Myers and Jeremiah J. McCarthy, of Charlestown, which have been commented on at various times, more especially last week, in Fractical Politics, have at by the speaker that if they don't crowd too hard, or ask him to play politics, or compel him to enter a contest, he is ready to be the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor next fall.

His announcement would not be public now but for the activity of one newspaper reporter, who objected to being carried along any further with requests to keep quiet for a while, which too often were coupled with denials of the entire story. He printed it as a fact that the tory. He printed it as a fact that the peaker was a candidate, and then kit dyers to do as he saw nt. Myers half onfirms it the next afternoon.

It may seem rather cruel to print it, but Speaker Myers announcement, on the whole, created very latie, if any, excitement among the politicians. They have been expecting such a step so iong that it came naturally. The men who took the most interest in it, strange to took the most interest in it, strange to say, were the men who are more interested in Myers as a speaker than as a candidate for the second place on the state ticket.

The fact that he really intended to get out of the speakership field struck them as the salient point of it all, and Adams. Dean and Newton, all of whom have intitle speakership booms of their own, clasped their hands with satisfaction to know that in a way the die had at last been cast. en cast.

Myers is so genial and accommodating a gentleman that they never felt safe, despite his original announcement, that this was to be his last year. They have had the constant fear that half a dozen or so gentlemen might make the request of him that he would run again as speaker, and that he would feel obliged to consent.

Now that he has at last shown his dis-of him that he would run again as speaker, and that he would feel obliged to consent.

Now that he has at last shown his disposition to entertain the boom, the chances are very good that he will not faiter in the race, as far as these gentlemen can help it, anyway. If they are reading their book, as the men at the state house have it, they will keep Myere extremely busy up to the time of the convention itself.

As to his chances for securing the nomination, that is another story. If the general opinion is to be taken, they are worth very little. Myers would make an interesting candidate—that cannot be questioned—and if the gentlemen who sit around banquet tables and discuss the highness of the why, with Myers for a principal speaker, all had votes of their own to give him, he would have a very respectable following.

Infortunately, however, these men are generally busy on caucus nights, and the speaker can hardly depend on them to come forward for him and bring the voters along.

The fact that he will have been speaker for three terms would seem to nelphim, but in his case the aid will be very slight indeed, compared with that which other men have got out of the office. The speaker has absolutely refused to build fences. His committee lists have been made up as he thought they should be, and he has had very little eye for anything else. Just now his new, or rather his newly admitted, ambition may change the slate in some particulars, but it is hard to see how, even now, he could attempt to do very much in the way of establishing a clientele over the state, which would come forth for him as old members did for John L. Bates.

The speaker has undoubtedly been courteous and obliging. He has mixed with the members and he has distributed consolation committee prizes after a fashion which few speakers ever adopted before. No man, in fact, has really tried harder to please. In his very neglect to lay wires for his own political advantage, it must be admitted, there is a certain element of strength. That sort of thing and was the Democratic candidate for secretary of state.

If chosen, Myers would assuredly be an honor to the commonweith but it is a very hard proposition to see where his nominating strength can come from The Boston vote is divided between Bates and Guild, and the Bates men, for their part, will devote all their attention to carrying their own candidate. They would not dare to antagonize the western vote by showing themselves a party to a scheme for holding the governorship in greater. Boston for six years. The state machine, Senator Lodge and others is already pledged to Guild, and the west will not nominate Myers with Congressman Lawrence awaiting the call. [Practical Politics.

CONGRESSMAN McCALL Writing from Boston to the Hartford Courant of Mr. McCall's independence, "Templeton" says: "I don't see any reason to suppose that Mr. McCall is tired of congress, or indifferent to his re-election, but he is not disposed to sacrifice his own opinions to make the road to it. ser to suppose that Mr. McCall is thred of congress, or indifferent to his re-election, but he is not disposed to sacrifice his own opinions to make the road to it more easy. He is the member of our delegation most in agreement with Senator Hoar on the Philippine policy pursued, and he is even less disposed to mince matters in giving his opinion upon the subject than is the senator. Senator Hoar, too, has spoken very strongly, but he seems to feel later that he has been too severe in his comment, and makes up for it by praise on other points for those he has already criticised. Mr. McCall is one of the two oldest men in service in our house delegation at Washington, I believe Mr. Gillett entered that hody at the same time with him. He has one of the best districts in the state, the city of Cambridge being included in it. Of course, he irritates some of the Republicans by denouncing the foreign went into the convention which nominated him last year, and complained of his unfaithfulness to party, regretting ludicrously that he had not taken Congressman Grosvenor, of Ohlo, as his model. It is not difficult to imagine Mr. McCall's amusement at this. The attempt to oppose him had no support outside of its originator. There was a temptation to get rid of him last winter when the congressional districts were re-arranged, but Mr. McCall came out of it with a stronger district in his favor than ever. It is probably no more than fair to give the Republicans of the state who don't believe in the expansion policy of the government one representative in congress, and it therefore might make mischlef if war should be declared against Mr. McCall."

Mr. McCall."

So Speaker Myers is a willin Barkis? It was a foregone conclusion that he would be, but who is going to be the successful one to cut the Gordian knot of succession to the governor's chair from that of lieutenant governor. It is not above suspicion that Col.—or is he Gen.?—Curtis Guild is the hero who should solve this modern myth by use of an axe: certainly he is well experienced in the grinding of political axes, and, in his own opinion, he is long overdue in the wielding of an axe. But busy rumor has it that Col.—Gen. Guild, whom the Republican managers have long found it a difficult proposition to d'spose of, is in the way of being side-tracked through a national appointment from President Roosevelt. As between Guild and Myers there is no hesitancy in giving Myers the preference, but meanwhile there are others in training. This promises to be a busy year for Republican politicians and Republican aspirants, and it would not be surprising if the reunited democracy might profit from the prospective quarreling over the spoils Meanwhile, the voters can sit back and watch the game, confident that in the ballot they hold the trump card. ### PARK THEATRE.

"Morocco Bound," the name of the brilliant musical comedy and great London success, suggests all those rare delights usually found between such covers. It will be produced for the first time in America, at the Park theatre, Boston, this evening, under the management of A. H. Chamberlyn, who made the original production in London, Frr., where it enjoyed a marvelous run of two years, divided between the Shaftesbury and Duke of York theatres, and is still playing to crowded houses in the English capital. The cast is a remarkably strong one, and the comedy parts are in most capable hands, Mr. Chamberlyn, whose reputation for magnificence of scenery and costume and ability to gather around him the rarest types of beautiful women and fresh young voices, is said to have excelled his former efforts in this production.

POOL.

There is no more exhilarating pastime to the man who uses his brain excessively than that of pool playing. It furnishes a radical change from the routine of constant thinking in regular channels for it brings into use a diversity of choughts entirely foreign thereto and therefore recreative in character. Besides, it affords much wholesome physical exercise otherwise. Our pool room at No 491 Mass Ave., Arlington, is a retreat for those who would, for a brief time, drive dull care away. It is kept in the most orderly manner and we solicit the patronage of gentlemen. We have no room for idlers or loungers of a social case who can not mingle with gentlemen.

CHILDREN'S THEATRE.

The opening performance of "The Magic Fiddle" is to be given at the Children's theatre, Huntington Chambers, 30 Huntington avenue, Boston, on Saturday, Jan. 11, at 2.30 o'clock. This will Huntington avenue, Boston, on Saturday, Jan. 11, at 2.30 o'clock. This will be the third play that has been given at this unique playhouse. It is a play entirely different than its predecessors, and one that should prove as attractive to older people as to children. Of course it is along lines that appeal strongly to all children, but there is much in it that all adults cannot help but appreciate. It is to be given by the same company that gave "Alice in Looking-Glass Land," and "Little Miss Muffet's Christmas Party." but with different members as the head liners, as those who take the leading parts are called. There are one or two new people in the cast, and one who should attract some attention is Margie Coburn, a sister of the now famous Tom Coburn. She has a remarkable voice for a child, and the part she will take, that of King of the Elves, gives her ample opportunity to display it. Of course Tom Coburn is to have a part, and also little Hazel Frost, who delighted all during the past four weeks by her portrayal of Miss Muffet. Alice Farrell is to take the leading part. She is a girl who, although but 16 years of age, has many attainments, and in this play will show her ability as a violinist. "The Magic Fiddle" is an opera in three acts and a prologue. The members of the orchestra have been rehearsing for some time. "The Magic Fiddle" will run about four weeks. Performances will be given every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock and Saturdays at 2.30 o'clock. The theatre is right at the city and easily accessible from all railroad stations. the third play that has been given at road stations.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Bronson Howard's modern play, "Aristocracy" is announced at the Castle Square theatre next week and promises to be a most enjoyable addition to the season's repertoire. It has always been considered as the best of the many excellent plays from the pen of its author and has gained immense popularity throughout the country ever since its original production. It is in the main a clever satire upon the foibles of society and the story has as its leading theme the struggles of a millionaire from San Francisco to get into the social swim of New York's exclusive society. The play teaches the folly of the pursuit of titles by American girls and points a good moral regarding the struggles to make wealth the end and aim of all life's efforts. CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.
